Trun Nature's Smallest praducts pleas the eye, While greater births pass unregarded by, Her monsters seem a voilence to sight: They reformed for terror, insects to delight. Thus, when she nicely frames a fiece of art, Fine are her ctrokes, and small in evy fact. No babour can she boast more wonderful Than to inform an atom with a soul; To animate her little beauteous fly, And dothe it in her gandiese drafery. The bids the Stroke, columbus like, explore Heavers not his own, and world's unknown before The calls the council, states the centain day? The form phalance, and who points the way? No numbers can the varying robe express, While each new day presents a different dress. the 6 How instinct varyes in the growelling surne, Compard, half reasoning selephant, with them! Iniset that, and reason, what a nice bances For ever separate, get for even near! Now o'er their head the whizzing whitemin breather And the live desert pants, and heavs beneath; Tinged by the crimson sun, vast columns rise Of cololying sunds, and wan a mid the skies, In read areacles the billowy plain surroune, the statking turnets dance when the ground Darmen.
